Reflections from the Rectory

Dear Friends

The last letter I wrote was for the March magazine and back in February the war had not started. Now Ukraine has been resisting the Russian forces with remarkable courage and fortitude for some time. They say that today Mariupol will most likely fall to the invading armies though from what little we see there is not much left of the city. Further North there are many reports of atrocities committed against the Ukrainian people and they will undoubtedly have been repeated in the southern cities too. Whatever the real reasons for the invasion it certainly was not to free the people of Ukraine from oppression.

Estimates suggest I believe that roughly 25% of the Ukrainian population have been displaced by the war and of course that is getting worse as more people flee their homes in the eastern regions of the country. The majority of those people have been displaced within Ukraine and may yet need to move into Europe to find safety but already over 3.5million are refugees in other countries. As you know Jesus and his family were refugees from the violence of Herod, he was a proud and arrogant man and to try and protect his inheritance had all the children killed in Bethlehem because he did not know God or God's promises. Years later when they returned from Egypt they found a new home in Nazareth. Such persecution has always been common in our world but God calls his people to be salt and light in the world. That is they are to bring life and hope. They are to deal honestly with everyone, they are to stand up for the oppressed, the downtrodden, the dispossessed. You will find many passages in the Old Testament that are instructions on how to treat everyone (even those who have been enemies) with kindness and generosity and justice. Just before his own arrest which was followed by a sham trial and an abandonment of justice followed by his crucifixion Jesus talked about judgement to come and justice. He said when I was hungry you gave me food and when I was naked you gave me clothing. We don't literally give these things to God but he says when we have compassion and generosity for others it is as if we did it for him.

Today the people of Ukraine are refugees in need of clothing and support but somehow by incompetence or design we seem incapable of matching the tremendous generosity and kindness of so many people in our nation with a sensible system to help those in such need and distress. It is I think damaging our reputation as a country that we seem able to facilitate the movement of armaments to Ukraine but not of Ukrainians to the UK. We need to continue to pray for peace, for governments that act rightly and justly and not out of fear or a desire to hold power over others. We need to pray for all who have been wounded and all who grieve and for all who are called to find the courage to take up arms or endure the fighting.

As Christians we need to seek peace and reconciliation that is just and preserves peoples freedoms and we need to hold to account those who fall under the spell of unjust powers. Our churches are run by human beings and it is easy to find historical examples of the church supporting unchristian regimes such as apartheid. It is for me particularly sad that the leadership of the Russian Orthodox community instead of speaking against war seems to be finding ways to justify it for their own benefit and their own power. This is not the way of Christ but the way of the world. It takes great courage to stand up to a dictator but Jesus called us to collect our cross and follow him. It was costly for him so why would it not be costly for us? While we were on pilgrimage recently we visited Caesarea, capitol of the Roman forces in the Holy land. A great many Christians were martyred there for holding true to their faith, we should pray that the church in Russia might be able to have the same courage to stand for truth and justice.

With love and prayers

Kemble

The End of a Village Era!

Gordon Lawrence Ayres born 15th November 1930 died 16th March 2022. (91 years)

Uncle Gordon was the youngest of 11 children, his eldest Sister Florence was born in 1904 followed by John Henry in 1906. Sister Maud was born in 1908, then Alfred in 1911. My father in law, Arthur, was born in 1913 and he was then followed by Doris, Albert, Howard, Harry, Phyllis and lastly Gordon in 1930. So his parents had children spanning over 26 years!!!!!

Gordon was born at the old canal pump house Thames Head, Kemble.

When Gordon was still quite young his mother Sarah left the family home to move into Cirencester with another man. So his older brothers and sisters who were left at home looked after him until his sister Doris, who had married, took him in. Gordon lived in Windmill road for many years until he moved to Tewesbury Lodge just past the Thames Head Pub. He married Pauline Moreman when he was aged 50 years. After some years they moved into Pykes cottage Washpool Lane, Kemble.

Gordon's working life was spent on Kemble Estate from the age of 14 years. During his time on the farm he milked cows, did tractor driving, combining, mowing, fencing, hedge —laying, block-laying for the barns at Smerrill, built silo clamps and finished up game- keeping! He was awarded an Agricultural long service medal which was placed on his coffin.

He loved his garden at Pykes cottage growing vegetables, the majority of which he gave away. Many villagers discovered veggies left on their doorsteps.

A collection at the cemetery gates was taken in Gordon's trademark trilby for the Perennial Gardener's Charity.

Gordon did all his own cooking and many a time I saw him take a tray of cooked chicken legs and roast potatoes swimming in lard from the oven saying - take a look at that!

When Pauline had declining health he willingly cooked her favourite - cheesy chips. Gordon surprised us all how he coped with Pauline as her health and mental ability failed her. When she moved into Elm Grove he wasn't one for bedside visits but often took her in strawberries from the garden and bought grapes and maltesers which he left with the staff to give her.

Many of the mourners had tales to tell about Uncle Gordon.

Both Gordon and Pauline played in the Skittle and dart teams at The Tavern over the years winning many trophies.

Gordon loved to have a lunchtime pint and some banter with the locals on a Saturday after his usual visit to the bookies in Cirencester, where he had placed his bets for the afternoon racing which he would then watch from his arm chair at home.

Farming Matters

This spring has provided farmers with some ideal weather conditions for planting their spring crops. Wheat and barley were sown in February and March and although the colder temperatures resulted in a slow start most are well established and on their way to producing valuable grain by August. Maize is the next major crop to be planted. You may have noticed locally a number of fields were being cultivated during the fine, dry weather we had during April. The Maize plant requires a soil temperature of around 8°C to germinate and there is a gamble to get as much seed in the ground ready for this threshold, being careful not to go too early as a late frost will kill the early emerged plant.

Maize is a very rapidly growing member of the cereal family. From early May to late September it will use its huge leaf area to capture as much sunlight as possible, producing around 40 Tonnes of crop per hectare. Most is ensiled for animal winter feed, but some is grown specifically as a feedstock for anaerobic digesters which produce renewable energy. Only a small portion of the UK maize crop is harvested as sweetcorn, around 2,500 hectares of the total 200,000 hectares of maize grown. This crop requires guaranteed sunshine throughout the summer. Sunnier summers have resulted in more of our sweetcorn being grown here.

Relatively speaking maize has not been grown in the UK for very long, a little over 200 years or so, compared to native Americans who grew it over 7,000 years ago. Maize (or corn, as the Americans call it) is more suited to warmer climates, like that of the USA, Mexico and China; and our summers were rarely warm or consistent enough to grow maize as anything other than a forage crop.

Fortunately, the last decade or so has seen a series of stunning summers and this has led to a resurgence of interest in the growing of maize for sweetcorn, particularly in the south of the UK. Plant breeding has also played apart, creating varieties more tolerant to our relatively cooler summers.

The cooler start to the spring doesn't appear to have affected grass growth rates too much. Early spring growth is remarkably consistent from year to year but last year saw a marked drop in growth rates in mid-April. There was a dramatic recovery when the weather warmed up and growth rates romped ahead by the end of May. It's not just temperature that affects the rate of growth, nutrients are essential for optimum crop growth, including grass. And, moisture is needed to allow the crops to access those nutrients. Some farmers are just beginning to wonder when it's going to rain again. Be careful what you wish for!

It's not all rosy in the farmyard, however. The UK is tackling its largest ever outbreak of Avian Influenza (bird flu) with over 100 cases confirmed across the country since the start of November, resulting in over 500,000 birds being culled. To help mitigate the spread of disease, the Government introduced new housing measures in November 2021 which means that all chickens, ducks, geese or any other captive birds are now legally required to be kept indoors with strict biosecurity measures to be followed.

Shoppers have been unable to buy free-range eggs in the UK since the end of March as Free Range flocks have had to be kept inside since November. Eggs sold in shops will have to carry a sticker or label saying they are in fact "barn eggs", the name given to eggs produced by hens permanently housed indoors.

Wild birds migrating to the UK from mainland Europe during the winter months and other wildlife spread the disease, so it is vital to not allow wild birds to mix with farmed chickens, ducks, geese or other birds.

Public health advice remains that the risk to human health from the virus is very low and food standards bodies advise that avian influenzas pose a very low food safety risk for UK consumers. Avian Flu (H5N1) is not linked to Coronavirus which is a SARS-CoV-2 virus and is not carried in poultry or captive birds. Irrespective of which came first, the chicken or the egg, they're both safe to eat – so crack on.

Lambeth Awards 2022

The Archbishop of Canterbury's 2022 Lambeth Awards were announced in early March. These were a total of only 37 awards made worldwide. One of the awards this year was made to Pauline Walker whom we have known and supported for many years: the citation reads:

The Reverend Pauline Walker – The Cross of St Augustine for Services to the Anglican Communion. For almost 44 years of missionary endeavour in Sudan and South Sudan through which she stimulated the development and training of a new generation of Christian leaders, many of whom are bishops today.

Many of you may remember Pauline coming to speak most recently in Kemble church in February 2018 about her missionary work and the many challenges faced by Christians in South Sudan. She had previously visited several times including a Benefice Service in January 2011 at Coates.

Act swiftly! Public asked to help endangered high-flying birds

The Wildlife Trusts & RHS call on gardeners to help swifts, swallows, and martins

Swifts

Are often heard before they are seen. They have a distinctive screaming call, and groups darting through the sky – often at dusk – are known as "screaming parties".

Although they used to nest in caves and trees, swifts have adapted to make their homes in towns and cities.

Form what is known as a "bolus" at the back of their throats, where they store flying insects that they catch on the wing. They can catch up to 20,000 insects in a day.

Can reach speeds over 65mph, making them the fastest recorded bird in level flight.

Swallows

Migrate to South Africa on a dangerous journey that can take up to six weeks.

Are often found close to water and can be seen in meadows and farmland.

Will mate for life.

House Martins

Are a colonial species, so they tend to nest in groups of around five nests.

Like swallows, they are among the few birds that build their nests from mud, using wet earth and grasses to create a home they can return to year after year.

Gardeners are being encouraged to install nest boxes and create habitats that boost insect numbers to help swallows, swifts, and martins as part of a new campaign. Wild About Highflyers is a joint initiative by The Wildlife Trusts and the Royal Horticultural Society's (RHS) Wild About Gardens campaign that aims to boost numbers of these charismatic migratory birds.

A new campaign guide provides gardeners with tips on how they can help swallows, swifts, and martins. Suggestions include:

- Creating a 'bog garden' with plants like marsh-bedstraw and purple loosestrife. Bog gardens provide valuable habitat for frogs, dragonflies, and a wealth of insects, as well as materials that swallows and house martins can use to build nests.
- Adding a swift box to an existing house or including a swift brick in any kind of new build. Ideally, swift boxes face north/north-east to help regulate the internal temperature and are at least five metres above ground.
- Letting a patch of grass grow long, providing vital habitat and food for insects and other wildlife.

This year, Wiltshire Wildlife Trust have also launched a 'Birds in Buildings' citizen science project to encourage people to record sightings of birds nesting in buildings across Wiltshire.

For more information on the campaign, and to download the guide, visit: https://www.wiltshirewildlife.org/birds-in-buildings
